PROGRAM OUTCOME

Good communication between patient and dentist will help in increased efficiency and more accurate diagnosis, improved patient outcomes and satisfaction and less likelihood of complaints or litigation. Soft skills, including communication skills, are important in dental practice as they reflect dental care professional's personal values and interpersonal skills and they also contribute to the successful provision of health care.

PROGRAM OUTCOME

Legal process is difficult and distressing to navigate, so it is best to avoid this when possible. It is very important to maintain dental records so that it can be produced as evidence in the consumer court in the event of a malpractice and dental insurance claim. Consent is a vital part of patient treatment and management. The concept of informed consent arises from the fundamental ethical principle of autonomy and rights of self-determination. Consent in dentistry follows the same basic principles as in other regulation of medicine. Usually there are a number of different choices available to a patient and all of these should be discussed with the patient and oral health professional must explain the proposed treatment to the patient, the risks involved, and the possibility of any alternative treatment and ensure that appropriate consent is obtained.

PROGRAM OUTCOME

The soft skills are skills people use to communicate, solve problems, lead and think creatively in contrast to hard skills, which are object, machines, tools and are technically oriented. Soft skills are used in personal and professional life. It helps to organize, plan, and manage the changes during the course of dental practice. Soft skills benefits growth of leadership positively. Practice management, gives motivation to specialty and general practice. It facilitates learning for perfection and growth of leadership implementation in newly developing practice. This is the most important management skills of all.

PROGRAM OUTCOME

Regular yoga practice can help to improve strength and flexibility in the muscles surrounding the spine, neck, shoulders and stomach. This has a positive effect on posture during clinical practice. As dental health professionals we are role models to our patients, our colleagues and the public. Therefore, it's important we do everything we can to stay physically and mentally healthy to be able to provide the best possible care.

PROGRAM OUTCOME

Dentists have the responsibility to always act in the patient's best interest and to provide the highest standards of clinical care. They have the duty to provide confidentiality, to fully inform patients of procedures and to obtain the patient's consent prior to treatment. Failure to follow the ethical and moral guidelines created by the profession can result in charges of gross misconduct and could ultimately result in the loss of a dentist's license to practice. It is therefore essential that every dentist practice ethical dentistry, not only for himself or herself, but for the profession as a whole.
